There died in Philadelphia a few days ago a man, Joseph Fels, who, next to Henry George, has probably done more to promote the single tax theory than any worker for that cause in history.

ABOUT WATER POWER.

President Wilson and his cabinet have been busily considering the policy of the administration in the matter or federal control of water power on the public domains and on navigable streams.

So far it appears that the decision is to lease sites to private corporations, the property to revert to the government after a specified term of years.

Doubt has been expressed if private capital would proceed to expensive developments upon the basis outlined. With federal regulation of rates and eventual federal ownership, the tenure would have to stretch over a considerable term of years to make the investment profitable.

It is well that the president and his advisers are receptive and not domain in the What is now done may fix a precedent.

over a considerance term of years to make the investment profitable. The investment profitable was a considerance and the advisers are receptive and not dogmatic in this matter. What is now done may fix a precedent for many years. And considering the paramount bearing water power is to have on the industrial development of the country, the subject looms large in importance. The political feature must also be remembered. Conservation of the he public mind, and any technical or real binner is littley quickly to be seized upon by the opposition. Fortunately, there are clear-headed men in the house and senate, as well as in the cabinet, who will not let the situation get too far out of hand, and who will not encurage radicalism or anything approaching. For the water power of the country to be tied up by onerous exactions would be a method of handling that turned over these great national assets to consciences private greed.
